Executive Version

Enhanced Executive Performance

Interacting effectively with a variety of people marks the difference between success and failure. Effective interpersonal interaction starts with an accurate perception of oneself. The TTI Success Insights Executive report gives executives a greater knowledge of themselves and others, leading to enhanced performance.

Effective Management Communications

Of particular interest to the executive is how the Executive report identifies interpersonal communication preferences. Knowing this, the executive can use a communication system with others that is more effective and productive. Executives will become more aware of how their natural and adapted behavioral styles are influencing others' reactions to them and either enhancing or inhibiting their success—and the success of others.

Increased Value to the Organization

Faced with ever-changing challenges and opportunities, self-knowledge assists executives in achieving success for their organizations. Executives and their coaches and/or mentors can develop action plans to build on their strengths and overcome factors limiting their success. The end result—increased value to the organization.

Achieving Superior Performance

People are most productive in environments that compliment and reward their own natural behaviors. However, natural behaviors may not produce desired results—especially when interacting with people who exhibit opposite behaviors. The Executive report will reveal a number of opportunities for improvements in communication, driven by the work environment and coworkers' needs. By understanding the most effective adjustments to make to achieve success, the executive learns to effectively modify behavior as required.

Report Content

Each Executive report contains a number of personalized sections that illuminate separate areas with opportunities for enhanced communications and understanding. The report can be professionally debriefed by the executive's coach or mentor, who can maximize the results and construct an effective action plan. This resulting information is ideal as part of a performance management process emphasizing personal accountability.
